Christine has called Kensington home since 2019 drawn to its idyllic streetscapes, established community and mature tree canopy. She lives here with her husband, two young children and their dog. Her family maintains trees that provide habitat for black cockatoos, strengthening her commitment to local biodiversity.

Christine has worked in healthcare for 13 years as a nurse and midwife, including in intensive care, emergency and as a flight nurse with the Royal Flying Doctor Service. Caring for some of Western Australia's sickest patients has shown her the value of strong communities. This led her to serve on the city's Public Health Advisory Group, bringing frontline knowledge to local policy.

Christine is a strong leader. She has been trusted with responsibility: making high-risk clinical decisions, managing staff, budgets and services. She served on the Royal Flying Doctor Service's Scope of Clinical Practice and Credentialing Committee and was recognised by the University of Notre Dame as a leader in nursing. She managed a medical device portfolio of more than 170 hospitals across Western Australia and South Australia, giving her experience in financial accountability.

Christine leads with fortitude, composure, integrity and sound judgement. She listens first, analyses the facts and is not afraid to ask difficult questions. She believes good decisions should withstand scrutiny and deliver genuine community benefit.

Christine is determined to protect what residents value about Moresby Ward while planning responsibly for its future. Having contributed to the City's Urban Greening Strategy, she will lead the charge to protect and grow our tree canopy, improve neighbourhood safety and support sensible development. Christine will advocate for greater transparency and accountability in the use of ratepayer funds, ensuring decisions are clearly explained and deliver genuine value for the community.
